

Formative Assessment
Expanded Venn Diagram Scoring Guide
Comparing and Contrasting Stacy Allison, Jim Lovell, Daedalus and Icarus

Comparing
	Stacy Allison, Jim Lovell, Daedalus and Icarus <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ They understood the consequences of their decisions. ▪ A process was in place to help them solve their problems – the decisions were thoughtfully considered, not made on a whim.
 	Stacy Allison and Jim Lovell Similarities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ The problem required a group decision. ▪ Time was a critical factor. ▪ The teams were well-trained for their missions. ▪ The teams faced life or death. Differences: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ The climbers could try another expedition – but the Apollo crew faced certain death if their mission failed. ▪ The Apollo 13 astronauts were considered heroes, while the climbers were not.
 	Stacy Allison and Daedalus and Icarus Similarity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Something other than their own lives was at risk: Daedalus was risking his son's life in addition to his own, and the climbers faced losing their dream of climbing to the summit. Difference: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Daedalus acted on his own. The climbers acted as a team.
 	Jim Lovell and Daedalus and Icarus Similarity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ The possibility of success is slim, but the protagonists carry out their plans anyway. Differences: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Daedalus acted independently, but the entire crew of Apollo 13 worked together to solve the problem. ▪ The Apollo crew faced certain death, but Daedalus was looking for escape. ▪ The Apollo crew was trained for their mission, but Daedalus was untrained.